

Philly PD officer reinstated

Philadelphia Police Department Chief Inspector Evelyn Heath, who was fired for allegedly harassing a fellow officer after their love affair ended, was reinstated with back pay after an arbitrator dismissed misconduct charges against her.

Heath's former lover, Nicholas DiPasquale, claimed Heath stalked him and the woman he married after he and Heath broke up. Heath denied the charges, and the arbitrator said he found Heath credible.