

Should you be criticized for not mingling with co-workers?

Question: “It was suggested during my performance review that I don’t attend enough office social events like happy hours or volunteer days, and that I keep to myself too much in general. Is this a valid criticism, or is my employer overstepping the bounds of how I should be judged at work?” – Christopher H., Facilities Assistant