

Is a performance improvement plan the end of opportunity?

Question: "I was placed on a performance improvement plan at work. I really think it's a way to slowly fire me, and it's such a morale killer to be under this kind of watch that I don't have much enthusiasm left for the job. Does anyone ever come back from being on probation like this to do really well with their company and leave the black mark totally behind? I sure can't think of an example." – Violet, Insurance Researcher

See comments below, and send your own question to Admin-Pro@nibm.net.