

Have you sworn an oath to the Grammar Police?

Question: "I take some criticism in the office because I'm a stickler for good grammar. So much of what we write to each other comes off as unprofessional that I think there does need to be one person who points out these little communication breakdowns. It's my way of trying to stop bad grammar from creeping over into the materials our clients and customers see. Am I right to keep standing up for the rules, or am I playing office politics incorrectly?" - Glenn, Film Librarian

See comments below, and send your own question to Admin-Pro@nibm.net.