

6 apps for note-taking organization

You may take notes for things like grocery lists and work meetings, and almost certainly know the frustration of misplacing a sticky note with a phone number or appointment time. Ditch the pile of scrap-paper notes on your desk or kitchen table with these apps:

- 1. Squid. If you're a fan of handwritten notes, Squid lets you use a stylus or your finger to write notes electronically.
- 2. Evernote. Evernote has lots of features, including checklists and doodles, and you can sync up with others for a collaborative project.
- 3. GNote. This one is good if you want a very simple, basic notes app.
- 4. Google Keep. If you like to keep things hyper-organized and use a lot of note-taking features, this may be good for you.
- 5. S Note. This app is good for helping you separate your different types of notes into "notebooks." It also offers more advanced drawing tools.
- 6. Just Note. Another simple app, this one is good for those who want an easy, to-the-point app.
